

INDIGENOUS SCHOOL FOOD EVENT SERIES

OCTOBER 12

Serving Traditional Indigenous Foods in School

The Indigenous School Food Working Group (Circle) is pleased to host a webinar on how school food programs are serving traditional Indigenous foods. Our speakers will share how they've brought traditional foods into schools, how they've been able to incorporate traditional game, and any tips that they would offer to other school communities who want to bring traditional foods into their school food programs.

First Comes Food:
A Podcast by Canadian
Feed The Children

First Comes Food, a podcast by Canadian Feed The Children, explores the surprising ways communities are feeding children and families in the face of a global food crisis. Join us on our journey through Indigenous food forests in Saskatchewan, farming communities in African countries and early childhood community programs in Bolivia and meet the people who are growing food security for everyone.

Listen to the podcast live here on October 16th.

OCTOBER 27 & 28

Come to the Table:
Exploring School Food
Together

Hosted by the School Food Development Project (SFDP) out of the University of Saskatchewan, this in-person knowledge-sharing event is intended to inspire stories of successful, Indigenous-led school food programs and to facilitate the sharing of information, resources and planning tools; while creating networking and planning opportunities.

For opportunities to livestream the event's presentations, please click here or email stef.foster@usask.ca for more information.
